Kissinger Again Fails

To Obtain

Cease-Fire

By Bernard Gwertzman JERUSALEM, May 14 (NYT). -Secretary of State Henry Kissinger abuttled between Damosens and Tel Aviv today without making any significant progress toward resolving the issues holding up a troop-separation agreement between Syria and Largel on the Earlier, Mr. Kissinger had set tonight as his deadline for deciding whether be could achieve the occord during this Middle East trip, now in its 17th day. But newsmen were told on the way from Damascus to Tel Aviv 10uight that Mr. Eissinger wanted another 24 to 36 hours to try to

from the two sides.

A senior American official on the Air Force jet said that the situation was "essentially in a holding pattern,"

Meets With Israelis Upon returning to Jerusalem by car from the Tel Aviv airport, Mr. Kissinger met with Premier Gokla Meir aud other top Israeli oillcials to go over once again the entire situation. He had to pass through a gauntlet of nolsy Israeli protesters, hostile to the discngagement negotiations.,

[After two hours of talks. Information Minister Shimon Peres announced that the Israeli cabinet would hold an emergency meeting tomorrow to see if it could offer anything more on the cease-fire and disengagement question, United Press International said.]
Mr. Kissinger files to Damascus tomorrow for another extended session with President Hafer al-Assad in the afternoon and eve-

The outward signs available to newsmen traveling with him suggested that Mr. Kissinger would probably return to Washington with some progress recorded in narrowing the gap between Is-rael and Syria, but with a complete disengagement agreement at least several weeks away.

But the senior American official refused to pronounce that judgment, saying that the talks could go either way—with Mr. Kissinger either achieving the agreement or having to come back again in a few weeks.

Central Problem The central problem seems to concern the differences over how far Israeli forces will withdraw on the Golan Heights.

The Israeli have proposed oulling back from the 300 square miles captured during last October's war, They have also offered to return some of the 400 square miles occupied in the June, 1967, war, The Syrians want to resettle the region with nationals displaced to both wars.

With 15 ministers, two fewer than in Mr. Brandt's government, there are only five new faces. Only one of these, Hans Apel, occupies a key post—the Finance Ministry, formerly headed by Mr. Schmidt Mr. Apel was a minister of state in the Foreign Ministry.

The new cabinet's composition clearly represents a continuation of the coalition Mr. Brandt and his foreign minister, Free Democrat Walter Scheel, have led since 1969. Despite last-minute maneuvering by the Social Democrats to wrest the Interior Ministry from them, the Free Democrats will retain it.

Mr. Faulkner is the head of Ulster's Protestant-Catholic gor-erning executive. Earlier this month he formed his own party after resigning from the old hardline Unionists. He said in a speech last night in Sheffield, northern England, that the IRA's documents showed quite clearly that they wanted to kill both Romon Catholics and Protestants. The aim, he said, was to start a civil war.

Today the Faulkner Unionists published a policy document on security in which they warned to the guerrillas.

However, the Provisionals denied that they ever intended to stir up sectarian hatred and chaos as part of their take-over blueprint, which they said related to a 'doomsday" plan drawn up some time ago.

For his part, Mr. Ortoll made it clear to Prime Minister Harold Wilson and Foreign Secretary James Callaghan that other EEC member nations would not tolerate any revision of the hasic treaties on which the community is founded. In other respects, however, the rest of the EEC will go to considerable lengths to give Britain satisfaction, or, at least, til next year. Cynics bere point out that after the recent Italian fiscal measures, the floating of the French franc and the packet of exceptions which Britain negotlated during this year's round of farm price-fixing talks, there is very little that an EEC menicountry cannot get away with. rather than principle.

Undoubtedly the most difficult problem Britain faces is to wm a reduction in its net contribu-tion to the EEC budget. In the current year, for example, Britain hopes to save between $187 million and $250 million, Mr. Ortoli is said to have understood that the political importance of this saving has more significance than the actual amount. Which will be small by comparison with Britain's estimated year-end balance-of-payments deficit. It is thought that Mr. Ortoli indicated in London that the conmunity is prepared to find ways of easing Britain's hudgetary con-tribution, either through a series of exemptions or by paying back through the social fund or the proposed regional fund more than Britain could have otherwise expected to receive.

The other crucial part of the renegotiation will be reform of the EEC's agricultural policy. There is less tolerance in Britain of the EEC's beef and butter "mountsins" than elsewhere in the community. Mr. Ortoli was told in London that such distortions would have to be cured. Although France and Ireland in particular will put up a vigorous defense of the EEC's farm-policy principles, it is generally accept-

The Soviet pilot, the magazine says, attempted a standard maneuver to avoid a midair collisionputting his plane into a steep

At this point, the magazine says, two other factors contributed to the crash. After refusing to allow a French cameraman aboard, the Russians are said to have compromised by agreeing to have the Tu-144's co-pilot film its maneuvers for French television. As a:

result, the co-pilot was not strapped into his seat and the suddive is said to have caused I to fall with his camera onto directional controls.

This, the investigators are s to feel, may have forced plane into a more severe d than planned and thus cost p cious seconds needed to right craft. In addition, the magaz says, the investigators believ but have not affirmed absolut _that there was a malfunct in the controls. French author ties are said to think that if controls had responded as rapi as they should have, it is proba that the pilot could still h

It is further understood t the investigators have ruled conjecture that the Soviet p was trying to outshine the Co corde because:

The report said the $17.1 million—$9 million for San Cle-mente and $8 million for Key Biscayne plus $176,000 for Grand Cay in the Bahamas, where Mr. Nixon is a frequent guest of his friend Robert Abplanalp—covers all costs, including personnel, in

Nixon Transcripts Give 2 Versions of a Talk

By Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward

WASHINGTON, May 14 (WP). -As the result of an apparent accident, the edited White House transcripts of presidential tape recordings contain two versions of a portion of the same conversation.

Their differences underscore the difficulties faced by the White House in transcribing the tapes and insuring the accuracy of the transcripts.

In answer to inquiries by the Washington Post, the White-House acknowledged late yesterday that three pages of the transcripts contain two conflicting versions of an April 16, 1973, conversation held by President Nixon and Assistant Attorney General Henry Petersen.

Confusion of Words

There is confusion because one uses the word "President" where the other has "press"; there are "Gray" (former FBI director Patrick Gray) in one and "they" in the other; "you" in one and "we" in the other; "stick" and "still," "bah" in one and "act" in the other. The first version contains 21 "inaudible" references while the second has 12

"We did the best we could." said Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald Warren, who confirmed that the two segments contained dozens of differences.

The existence of the two versions of the April 16 conversation caught two White House officials by surprise. "It kind of under-cuts the argument that the tran-scripts will do the job doesn't it?" one source commented.

In an introduction to the edited transcripts, Mr. Nixon said that "the attached transcripts represent the best efforts accu-

The pilot's account included days of phone calls to locate the plane, negotiations with Panamanian officials, carrying $17,500 in cash for expenses and bouts with balky navigational equipment once the plane was aloft.

Morals and the State

That the referendum sustaining Italy's divorce law was a most significant political event few will dispute. Both the government of Mariano Rumor and his Christian Democratic party have been badly weakened; the political influence and the legal standing of the Roman Catholic Church in Italy have been challenged. Church and state, which, under the Italian Constitution, are "each in its own order, independent and sovereign," may revert to the frictions and mutual hostility of the Risorgimento and the Italian monarchy, before Mussolini's Lateran Pacts of 1929.

That this crisis should erupt over divorce may seem strange to lands in which divorce is easy and common, and in whirh the whole institution of marriage has come into question. But marriage and its dissolution are a central factor in church-state relationships: It is of great importance to the church-to whatever rhurch or faith may influence public morality in any given land -hecause of the religious significance that attaches to relations between the sexes; to the state because so many elements of personal status so many aspects of private property, are affected by marriage. And there is also the subject (which long was acrepted as a sorlological axiom) of the need to maintain the family as a basir social unit.

Whether, in the distant past, religion was employed to holster this unit, or whether family integrity in fact derived from concepts of a divine order, church and state long combined their sanctions to maintain that integrity. They still do in Israel, where civil marriage and divorce have been resisted successfully by Orthodox Judaism and even in countries where, as in the United States, rhurch and state are constitutionally separate and where no single creed has ever been predominant, the influence of religion on marriage and divorce was very powerful until a comparatively short time ago.

In Italy, as in Israel, organized religion is a strong historical fact; its forms and symbols are associated with the life of the state to an extent that few other modern countries know-although it ran he found in varying degrees in, say, England and many Moslem states. The adjustment of a dominant religion to the life of its people, and to their government, has never been easy; in the present generation, which doubts so many of the older values and the institutiona that represent them, the tensions have been greater and more widespread than at any time in history.

The United States knows them in arguments over the legal condition of abortion and homosexuality: Libya sees them in state efforts to revive Moslem zeal and Moslem ways of thought and action: Northern Ireland is torn by them, even if there it is more a matter of applying religious labels to political groups and eronomic classes. Italy. whatever its referendum on divorce may imply for the future, has at least chosen a democratic way to resolve this particular

Commitment to the Hungry

Sen. Humphrey has posed a moral chailenge to well-fed-and frequently overfed-Americans with his recent cali for generous U.S. contributions to a broad new world food action program.

Responding to the threat of widespread starvation that has been sharply increased by worldwide shortages and soaring prices of basic commodities, the senator proposes: resumption of large-scale food aid by the United States and other food-exporting nations; establishment of national and international food reserves; expansion of fertilizer distribution and production, and stepped-up aid to agricultural development, including the pending contribution to the International Development Association.

Although Mr. Humphrey's plan for action merely elaborates on promises already advanced by Secretary of State Kissinger at the recent special UN session, it faces stiff resistance within the Nixon administration and from a people who have just begun to see some hope for relief from soaring food prices. The day is gone when Americans had food to burn, when overseas aid was a convenient way to unload embarrassing surpluses. Even with record harvests due, a new giveaway program on the scale contemplated by the senator would put fresh pressure on domestic prices and would compete with potential cash sales to more affiuent

There will be those who will seek refuge from responsibility in the heartless suggestion of Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz that Hunger is relative—if your larder is empty. you cut hack some." For one billion already undernoorished people in the 30 poorest countries, cutting back means sinking from acute malnutrition into starvation, or diverting to food purchases scarce resources that are desperately needed to help develop food seif-sufficiency.

The cost to Americans of helping these nations through the current crisis would be trivial in comparison. For example, Sen. Humphrey estimates that a decision by Americans to eat one less bamburger a week would make some 10 million tons of grain available for food assistance, twice India's expected import requirements for the comng year. The fertilizer Americans lavish on lawns and other nonagricultural luxuries would make up Asia's anticipated fertilizer deficit, helping Asians to feed themselves.

The primary responsibility for overcoming shortages and for curbing the runaway population growth that vastly compounds the food problem lies with the stricken nations themselves. This does not mitigate the moral chligation of the more fortunate. including the newly-rich oil states, to extend emergency relief. Population control at best requires years to take effect: and while that's an essential element in the solution, the United States in the meanwhile raonot abirk the food-supply role to which it is committed by virtue of its vast resources and its tradition of humanitarian leadership.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

A Cold War Relic

At the close of World War II, American troops acquired from Hungarian fascists the 1.000-year-old crown of St. Stephen, the most precious historical relic of Hungary and its foremost symbol of national legitimacy. Incredibly, the United States still has it, though the ostenable basis of America's holding it all these years-cold-war hostility to the Communist regime in Budapest-has long since heen highred by time, politirs and good sense. It is shameful that the United States dld not return the crown years ago.

The offirial American position is that tha crown's return ran only he considered in circumstances of the substantial improvement of Hungarian-American relations. Officials carefully - and inexcusably - avoid spelling out what this means. In fact, those relations have substantially improved in rerent years. After the freeze that followed the Hungarian revolution of 1956, ambassadors were again exchanged. Vialts by leading figures are now routine. The departure of Cardinal Mindszenty from the American Legation in Budapest, where he had taken sanctuary in 1956, removed a particularly troublesome obstacle. Agreement on American property claims was reached last year. Trade possibilities ara being actively explored; the special hindrance there lies on the American side-in the Congress—is the failure to end tariff discrimination against Hungarian goods.

True, the United States did scold the Hungarians last fall for allowing transit to Soviet war supplies bound for Egypt. Yet no honest observer expected Hungary, which sits on the Soviet border and which is still occupied by Soviet troops, to huck Moscow on an issue of that magnitude. Indeed, if the United States does wish to encourage Hungarian nationalism in responsible ways, it defeats its own purpose by holding onto the crown. Keeping troops in Hungary is Moscow's way of trampling on Hungary's nationhood. In an important sense, alienating the rountry's most meaningful national symbol puts Washington in the same boat.

The real reason why the United States keeps the crown, we suspect, is a certain hureaucratir reluctance to avoid antagonizing a small number of Hungarian emigrés who periodically get their congressmen to throw militant anti-Communist resolutions into the hopper. We cannot believe, however, that most of these emigres are not ready to support the magnanimous gesture of returning the crown of Stephen to its rightful home. A great power ought to be rapable of conducting relations and resolving differences with small countries on the merits of matters, without the necessity of holding a relic as ransom for the performance of some unspecified political act.

Impeachment Threat and Nixon Diplomacy

By Murrey Marder

WASHINGTON.—President Nixon's hopes for conducting effective and dramatic summit diplomacy this summer are being seriously challenged by the cries for impeachment echoing around

The cascading erosion of sup-port for the President is deeply troubling the Nixon administration's diplomatic strategists. They had projected two or more sum-mit-type presidential journeys during the summer to display his undiminished capacity to travel the high road of state while impeschment charges were grinding through the Congress.

That intended international scenario is now heavily clouded by the profound public and conal rebound over publication of the edited White House tape transcripts.

No change, or even discussion of change, in the President's projected travel plans is known to be under official consideration. There is, however, a growing feeling of frustration among administration strategists that any of their plans may be overtaken by escalation of the domestic fer-

Domestic Dissent

With domestir dissent enveloping the White House, President Nixon is in a doubly unprecedented situation. While American attention has been fixed on his fate. a tide of spectacular governmental change has been rolling across the international horizon.

President Nixon is the only major Western leader who has been in office more than 212 months. Since the end of repruary, power has changed hands peacefully in Britein, in West Germany, in France; Portugal has had a military coup; Canada's Parliament has been dissolved for new elections; so have the Icelandic and Australian parliaments.

Valery Giscard d'Estaing, candidate for president in the final round of France's elections oo Sunday to provide a successor to that nation's Gaullist regimes, expostulated in an interview last

"Who would ever have dreamed of the upheaval that has taken place in Burope? [French] President Pompidou is gone, Mr. Heath (Britain's former Conservative party prime minister) is out of office, [West German] Chancellor Brandt has left the stage. In just a few weeks the whole European scene has changed."

It could take months to sort out the multiple realignment of relationships among the new leaders in Western Europe and their impact on East-West relations, on the future of the European Common Market and total Western European links, and the repercussions on the North American-Western European Atlantic Al-

- Letters Brandt Steps Down

I read with great sorrow the decision of Willy Brandt to step down as chancellor of West Ger-many. Undoubtedly he will long be remembered as the man whose aspirations and ambitions launched West Germany and Europe into a new prospective in world politics. This most unfortunate less of such an astute statesman will be felt worldwide.

I cannot but admire the courage and fortitude displayed by Mr. Brandt in making such a decision. Just as the captain with his ship or the coach with his team. Brandt realized that as chantellor he alone held full responsibility for any irregularities in his government. It takes quite a man to live up to this responsibility.

And it is this type of man that Richard Nixon is obviously not. As President, Mr. Nixon saw fit to surround himself with people of the most incorrigible type and Mr. Nixoo, too, must bear the responsibilities of his and their

by President Nixon this summer to an East-West European security conference at a heads-of-government level, however, now appears more dublous, irrespective of American developments,

The governmental turnovers in Western Europe may further delay or compound negotiations in Geneva to set the stage for such a conference. Europe Shaken

All Europe has been shaken by tha departure of Brandt. He and President Nixon were the Western pillars of East-West détente. Now the shadows fall heavily across Mr. Nixon's fate.

Analysts in the United States are still trying to sort out the causes for what might appear on the surface to be "a domino effect" of falling governments, but which actually involves many totally unrelated events.

The most common denominator for upheaval has been inflation, many specialists agree. Canadian Prime Minister Plerre Elliott Trudeau calls it the worldwids "scourge of inflation," suddenly intensified last winter by the three and four-fold leap of oil prices. Inflation punctured the bubble of the West German and European "economic miracle" as well as the economies of most other nations of the world.

Disenchantment with the ability of national leaders to solve problems, and disillusionment with the creditability of government are rated as major contributing factors in the growing gap between rulers and ruled.

The temptation undoubtedly exists for Soviet exploitation of Western disorder, U.S. experts roncede. They expect the Soviet Union and its allies to take adgaining Helmut Schmidt, who is vantage of opportunities, but not more demanding on terms of at the cost of jeopardizing de-

Resignation

Spreading demands in Congress for the resignation of President Nixon, at least so far, have not reached the point of overwhelming opposition to a summit meeting in Moscow while impeachment action is pending, on grounds that President Nixon will be too weakened to negotiate effectively.

Instead. Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) said last week that there will be no heavy Senate opposition to summltry this summer.

... He is the President," said Mansfield, and "there is very little opposition as far as I can see to his holding a summit meeting and possibly going to the Middle East. ...Makeup for Men Arrives

NEW YORK (NYT),-Makeup facial bronzers that make a man look as though he commutes to of blusher when he's green from a hangover, but the works: eveshadow, mascara and maybe some

Mary Quant Cosmetics has brought male face-painting out of the closet with a magazine advertisement showing a young man and a young woman wearing matching blue-shadowed eyes and rosy mouths. (And not much of anything else except chain necklaces.) His hand on her bare shoulder is decorated with dark natl polish. Scary? "Let's face it," says Jack Winters, president of the Gala Cosmetics Group Inc., which distributes Mary Quant here, plenty of men are already wear-ing makeup. Take a walk on Third Avenue and look around. They're wearing it, they might as well buy ours." Mr. Winters continues that his company is not knocking down doors, but he feels that male makeup is fashionable among tha young and not necessarily a homosexual fad. "Enlightened young people have less hangups today," he went on, "Couples come to the counter together and

"You're putting your head in for men is here. Not just the sand if you ignore the trend." he said. "Men accepted bronzers without fuss and they're really a form of foundation. There is, the Bahamas. Or a discreet touch of course, a heavy homosexual acceptance, but a lot of the rock singers-Alice Cooper, David Bowie-wear makeup and the kids just want to paint their faces."

There has been a mixed reaction from department-store buyers. Some laughed and had no objection to the idea since it does not involve extra inventory (there will be no special men's line). Others were annoyed at the idea. "Anyway, we're going to have fun with it," Mr. Winters

Mr. Winters was already braced for the inevitable question about whether he uses makeup: "Do dress manufacturers wear

The fad also has found its way to the O'Susanna boutlque, where Susanna Gorson sells the perfume she concocts, along with handmade accessorles. Susanna-she prefers to be called by her first name only—used to work in the East Village and has many friends among the rock groups. She started by doing fanciful makeup for them.

cover undereye shadows and a bit of cheek blusher. "Sometimes I pencil their eyebrows lightly, especially if they're going gray." One man called for a makeup appointment and then arrived with his wife, who apparently approved. Since young people usually copy whatever their rock idols do, one can now visualize domestic scenes that should be even wilder than the long-hair controversy of the 1960s. "Is that mascara you have on?" an trate parent might ask his offspring. "Sure, all the guys at school are wearing it."

CANNES FESTIVAL

Resnais's 'Stavisky': A Hit

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss CANNES, May 14 (IHT).—The most anxiously awaited French film of the year-Alain Resnais's "Stavisky"-had its premiere at the Cannes Festival tonight. Great secrecy surrounded its making and little advance news about it has leaked out; the editing was completed only last week, Its unveiling here was cheered, and it seems destined for suc-

Resnais, the "author" of "Last Year in Marienbad" and "Hiroshima, Mon Amour," has selected on this occasion a subject that will arouse enormous curiosity, Forty years ago the Stavisky affair nearly toppled parliamentary rule in France. The investigation of Alexandre Stavisky's frauds after his suicide or murder brought down the administration and the Fascists sought to seize power. The climax was a bloody riot in the Place de la Concorde. Resnals hints at the repercussions that shook the country after Stavisky's death, but his scenario concentrates chiefly on the last months of the playboy-swindler's life as he tries desperately to patch up his crumbling empire.

Ran Paris

Stavisky was only a crook on bail, but, understanding monled society, he manipulated the police and politicians to ensure his own immunity. In a sense he ran Paris-the press, the turf, politics and the smart world-a dashing figure in a glittering scene. He knew how to flatter and threaten. but his trump card was bribery. and experience had taught him that almost every man has his price Resnais has drawn a persuasive portrait of the daring gambler and the chic Paris of the early 1930s of which a Russian-born imposter was temporarily king. Jean-Paul Belmondo plays the ingratiating fraud with an abundance of charm and an undercurrent of brooding melancholy. Stavisky, as Resnats pictures him, is haunted by his inevitable doom. pondering whether death is not better than prison.

In support there are some fine performances: Charles Boyer as the aristocrat who befriends tha double-dealer, François Perier as his cynical, envious aide, Claude Rich as a police investigator and Michel Lonsdale as another intimate, while Annie Dupercy is an ornamental asset.

Resnais's "Stavisky." is a motion picture of high style and and serious social criticism.

"Mahler" finds Ken Russell on another misfiring high-camp rampage. His ludicrous fantasia of the life and death of the Austrian musician is of "Springtime for Hitler" design, complete with racist jabs, goose-stepping choreography, cheap comic-strip wheezes and scatological obsession. Azide from its accompanying score, it has little to do with Mahler or, indeed, with anything

Since Woody Allen was evidently unavailable, Russell has singled out Robert Powell, a sort of English Allen, to play the lead, and Mahler is presented as a foul-mouthed fldget, grimacing and cavorting like a demented musical-comedy choose man, Mrs. Mahler, the august Alma (played by Georgina Hale), is shown, first, as the coy ingenue of a bcotlegged Tyrolean operetta and, later, as a callous society matron. She was, in fact, a member of the imperial court and after Mahler's death married the Austrian writer Franz Werfel, and became a formidable force in the anti-Nazi movement. philistine vulgarity, this "Mahler" is positively stupefying, a monument of atrocious taste, consistent only in its rabid hatred of gran-

"Bonnie and Clyde" continues to influence American cinema as may be witnessed in two films from Hollywood: "The Sugarland Express" from Steven Speilberg and "Thieves Like Us" from Robert Altman, both picturing outlaws with humorous affection. In "The Sugarland Express," a wife urges her jailbird husband to escape from a Texas prison farm to help her reclaim their child who has been placed in a foster home. The prisoner escapes fascination, psychological depth and holds long lines of police cars at bay as he undertakes the long journey across the state, winning public sympathy as the news spreads. What we have here is actually a two-hour chase, but Speilberg and his actors-Goldle Hawn as the insistent mother, William Atherton as her simpleminded mate and Michael Sacks as a policeman who becomes their unwitting companion-make it a diverting pastime, "Thieves Like Us." based on a novel written 40 years ago, is set in Mississippi during the Depression and is about a trio of bandits, their bank robberies and their private affairs when hiding out. Keith Carradine delivers a striking performance as the youngest gunman and Altman's direction convincingly conjures up the dismal milieu, but it is constantly reminiscent of other and better movies of the school.

"Les Autres." frightful French nonsense about a gloomy Parisian bookseller, was hooted by first nighters and "Symptoms," a ghoulish film from Britain about a knife-happy Lesbian luring victims to her woodland retreat. probably escaped a similar fate spectators out of the theater or put them to sleep. The Hungarian "Cats' Game," telling of a lonely widow of Budapest, had pictorial and atmospheric quality, but proved dramatically static.

From Spain there was 'La Prima Angelica" (Cousin Angelica) from Carlos Saura who seemed to be intent on using the old comic notion of an adult being sent back to school. Saura's middle-aged protagonist returns to his classroom in his presentday form and never stops talking. One comes away with the impression of a baldheaded actor with his mouth open for two

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

GM Raises Prices 1.9 Percent

General Motors is raising prices on its 1974 model cars and trucks an average $103 each, bringing to $394 the average increased cost of a GM vehicle in this model year.' GM says the increase amounts to 1.9 percent, plus a $10 per vehicle increase in destination costs. The company blames cost pressures for the increase. GM says this will be its last general price increase on 1974 models, but warns of substantial increases in the 1975 models, which will be out in Sentember. The automaker adds that its increase is within the bounds of an agreement that GM. Ford and American Motors made with the Cost of Living Council and the council agreed. A spokesman for the council said. "We are pleased that they're showing restraint."

ICI to Expand Terylene Capacity Britain's leading industrial concern, Imperial Chemical Industries, is to doubla the output capacity of its most famous manmade fiberterylene. It is spending £12 million on a new terylene staple plant in Wilton, Teeside, expected to come on atream in 1976. The new plant. which will be capable of producing 32,000 tons a year, is in addition to the 10,000-ton increase in capacity at Wilton which the company announced a year ago. The terylenc fiber market was one of those worst hit hy overcapacity problems in the late 1960s, but the price of cotton and wool has risen so sharply that manmade fibers are now almost half the price. relative to natural fibers, they were in 1969.

Toyo Kogyo to Cut Exports to U.S.

Toyo Kogyo, maker ot the Mazda auto, says it will export 150,000 vehicles to the United States this year down from the originally pro-jected 180,000 units because of a slowdown in demand. The revised amount, however, represents a gain of 25.4 percent trom 1973. Toyo Kogyo officials note that the original and revised export figures exclude 84,000 half-ton trucks to be supplied to Ford Motor. The company expects global auto exports in 1974 of about 450,000 units, up from the initially projected 400,000 units. Company officials say the upward revision is due to brisk demand in Europe

Lykes-Youngstown Corp. should have "significant Improvement" in profitability in 1974, chairman J. Lykes jr. reports. He says that if profitability continues at the levels of March and April, net income for the second quarter will be substantially larger than the initial quarter of 1974. Profitability of the steel division is showing great improvement, reflecting better operations and higher prices for steel products. Mr. Lykes says the company's shipping division is also showing profit improvement, with a significant earnings rebound from the depressed levels of

In Nearly a Year; Banks Act Kuwait and other oil producers would continue to set their own

The dollar today sank to its low-est levels for nearly a year against some European currencies, but later recovered after reported dollar purchases by two Europeao central banks.

LONDON, May 14 (Reuters),-

The dollar, which has been subjected to a new flerce bout of selling pressure over the past few days, closed marginally stronger against the West German mark at 2.3960 marks compared with 2.3925 marks last night.

This followed a purchase of $27 million by the Bundesbank in support of the Americao currency, according to Frankfurt sources. Zurich bankers said they belier-ed that the Bank of France had also intervened on the markets to huy some $25 million. Although the dollar was looking a little healthier conight. there was continuing concern in international banking circles over current confusion on the world linancial markets.

This has been caused by a host of political and economic un-certainties, including President Nixon'a Watergate troubles, the effects of oll price rises on the industrial nations, and speculation about new currency realignments, including a revaination of the strong West German mark.

three major central hanks are seriously considering the possibllity of coocerted interveotion oo the foreign exchange markets to maintain orderly conditions.

The U.S. Federal Reserve, the Buodesbank, and the Swiss national bank would take such action in the near future if the sources believed.

The pound sterling has also been under pressure in anticipation of bad foreign trade figures. which are due to be published

Sterling, which tonight closed one cent lower against the dollar at $2.4195, has undergone a sharp depreciation against other major currencies over the past lew days.

It has now passed the trigger point at which the British gorernment is obliged to compensate foreign official sterling holders for a decline in the currency's value.

The accord replaces a 25 percent participation agreement that was signed by Mr. Al Atlqt last rear. Uoder the old agreement. which the government withdrew rather than submit to a restive parliament for required ratification. Kuwait would not have obtained majority control until 1982.

The participation concept. which Saudi Arabia, Qatar and Abu Dhahi had also accepted, was overtaken hy Iraq's complete nationalization of most Western oil interests. Iran's negotiated 100 percent takeover of its Western firms, and Lihya's 51 percent seizure of most Americao lirnis.

The extent of the price rise for Kuwani oit that the new agree-ment will bring remains unclear because of Saudi Arabia's pledge to bring down the prices that oil producers charge to Western companies. The prices have quadru-pled in the past 17 months.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY CALIFORNIA ASIATIC OIL COMPANY

(A SUBSIDIARY OF STANDARD OIL CO. OF CALIFORNIA)

The Government of the Libyan Arab Republic on February 11, 1974, announced the issuance of a decree whereby it purported to oationalize immediately all of the interests and assets in Libya of California Asiatic Oil Company ("Calasiatic") in relation to Concessions 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 51, 73, 83, 119, 120, 131, 122 and 133 in Libya. The Government of the Libyan Arab Republic had previously purported to nationalize 51% of Calasiatic's interests and assets in all of these concessions on September 1, 1973, an action publicly stated by the Government to be in retaliation for Calasiatic's refusal to accede to the Government's demands for transfer to it of interests in all of its coocessions for an amount far less than their true value. The action by the Government on February 11 coincided with the opening of the Washington Conference of principal oil consuming nations and was characterized in a Libyan Government press release as a "practical and decisive reply to President Nixon's message to Col. Moammar Gaddali."

The Government of the Libyan Arab Republic has purported to transfer all of Calasiatic's interests and assets in Libva to the Libyan National Oil Corporation.

Calasiatic's rights to these coocessions were acquired from the Libyan Government by Calasiatic and Texaco Overseas Petroleum Company jointly through Deeds of Concession granting these companies the exclusive right to explore for and to produce oil from the areas of Libya covered by these concessions and to export the oil. Crude oil is presently produced from two concessions: Concession 47 crude oil is called "Sirtica Crude" and that produced from Concession 51 is called "Amna Crudc."

These actions of the Government of the Libyan Arab Republic were discriminatory and arbitrary. As such, they are a clear violation of International Law as well as of contractual obligations of the Libyan Government which are provided by Libyan law. Calasiatic has protested the announced decrees and, in accordance with the concessions, has called for arbitration of the dispute arising from the Libyan Government's actions. Calasiatic has also notified the Government of the Libyan Arab Republic that the Government's acts are wrongful and incapable of depriving the company of its rights.

Accordingly, the attention of all those who may be concerned with these developments, whether as purchasers of oil or otherwise. is drawn to the continuance of Calasiatic's rights with respect to crude oil produced from the above-mentioned concessions and products manufactured or derived therefrom. It is the intention of the company to assert those rights whenever and wherever necessary against those who infringe them.

Reflecting rising demand for its basic goods and services, Tenneco's momantum continued to acceterate in 1973.

Ravenues increased 19%, with all six major business groups posting gains. Net income gained 13% and earnings per common share

For the second consecutive year, the Company increased the cash dividend rate on its common stock. The new annual rate, placed in effect during the fourth quarter of 1973, is $1.44 per common share.

As a company built upon serving the basic needs of man-for energy, food, clothing and shelter-Tanneco is uniquely positioned to help meet the challenge of today's economy.

Few companies are tackling the energy problem on as many different fronts: natural gas, oil, coal, nuclear power, worldwide negotiations for new energy sources, and shipyard expansion for building ultra-large oil tankers and LNG carriars. Plus catalytic auto exhaust systems to help purify amissions and use energy more afficiantly.

tn food, we pack and market premium fresh fruits and vegetables, manufacture farm machinery to hetp grow more food, and supply the paperboard packaging needed for shipment of tood and goods of atl tn clothing, we supply chemicals for synthetic fabrics, plastics and many other consumar related products. In shetter, we develop whole communities and manufacture construction equipment for all kinds of

As N. W. Fraeman, Chairman, notes in the 1973 Annual Report: "This broad capability in basic areas will better enable us to withstand the economic uncertainties that currently cloud the horizon. All things considered, we believe we are better fortified than most because of our careful diversification and multimarkat service."

LAST CHANCE IN CHINA

The World War II Dispatches of John S. Service. Edited by Joseph W. Eshcrick. Random House. 409 pp. $12.5

Reviewed by Anthony Austin

SOMETHING of a legend has grown around that devoted group of foreign service officers who reported so presciently from China during those four pivotal years, 1942 to 1945, when America's postwar course in Asia was heing decided, and who are destroyed by their own countrymen when the policy they recommended was rejected and the disaster. they warned of arrived. Time has vindicated them—John S. Service, John Paton Davies, John Carter Vincent, O. Edmund Clubb and others less well known. The story of their vilification at the hands of Sen. Joseph McCarthy and his pack and their banishment as "security risks" hy their cow-ed superiors at the State Department has been told. There is awareness now of the misconceptions and compulsions that drove the nation from this fateful starting point to Korea and Vietnam and the consequent po-litical, economic and social traumas here at home. Is more to be gained, then, from a read-ing of diplomatic dispatches that have been gathering dust in Foggy Bottom archives all these

The answer is an emphatic yes. Skillfully compiled and edited by Joseph W. Esherick, these confidential messages, with their intimate feel for the China where Service was born, are a piece of time torn from history, still steaming with urgeocies and passions that gave it life.

By 1942, the Chiang Kai-shek who once scintillated on the Chinese stage as the vanquisher of warlords and the symbol of Chinese resistance to Japan had shrunk to the measure of a feudal satrap, obsessed with dividing general against general and clique against clique so as to stay in power in a "free China," eaten hollow by inflation, corruption, famine, ruinous taxation, hrutal conscription and peasant uprisings against these woes. In Yenan, Service I and a different kind of Chinese leadership. The Communists headed by Mao Tsetung had abandoned land confiscation and other early aping of Russian Communism; they now relied on a policy of reduc-ing rents and interests sufficiently to win over active peasant support, hut not so much as to alienate the landlords and merchants in their widening domain. The result was a genuine rallying of the people to a cause they considered their own, and to effective guerrilla warfare againd the Japanese.

Reasoning that China had satisfy the people's basic materineeds to have any kind (economic base, Mao wanted a accord with the Americans pre-viding for postwar America-capital investments to build as a light consumer-goods industry Reasoning further that Chin lacked the natural resources eve to become an industrial power of the first rank, he was willing to promise a market for Amer ican manufactures the Chine could not fashion themselve Russia would be too preoccupie with its own reconstruction for any such role, Besides, contact with Moscow were attenuated the Americans in China were a enormous political force. "Ames ica does not need to fear the will not be cooperative," Ma told Service. "We must cooperat and we must have America help. This is why it is so impor tant to ns Communists to knowhat you Americans are thinking and planning. We cannot ris crossing you-cannot risk an conflict with you."

The American mission in th wartime Nationalist capital o Chungking had despaired seeing the arms it gave Chian being put to use against th Japanese rather than hourded fo their use against the Chines Communists; Service now recommended that the Unite States supply arms to the Communists as well. He saw this s a means of hastening Japan defeat, but even more fun damentally as a way of placin the Americans on an equal foot ing with both rival Chinese re gimes. That and nothing else, h told Washington, would compe Chiang to agree to a coalition government, the only peacefu solution in sight. Otherwise, h warned, the Japanese surrende would be followed inevitably by: Chinese civil war. The Com minists, confronted by an Amer ican-armed Nationalist offensive would turn against the Uniter States and be driven into the Russian embrace. They wouk triumph over the Nationalists an unify China, but probably in a inflamed and anti-America His advice was ignored. Wha he predicted came true. The chance to establish a friendly relationship with the winning side in China was lost. That ! " how we "lost China" in the tru sense of that catch phrase. Esberick, whose prologue an epilogue, and explanatory par sages in between are masterl . suggests that perhaps the chance had to be lost for America realize in retrospect that it ha been there. If so, the tragedy we that of two different culture caught in a weh of mutual need, wounding each other because they could not see each other

'Tentatively' in Pole Position

INDIANAPOLIS, May 14 time trials, Rutherford blew the Ted Williams and Mickey engine of his McLaren-Offy, and Unser burned out a piston in his Viceroy Eagle-Offy. Both cars were back in their garages for replacements and repairs at 11:06 a.m. when Poyt, the first quali-fier, took the track. Under a strict interpretation of the rules. Unser and Rutherford were not considered to be "in line" at the proper time and therefore they were not eligible to try for the pole position. Foyt's speed was two miles an hour quicker than that of Wally Dallenbach, the second-place qualifier, but he still was disappoloted: "It's not as good as I wanted, but it's up there on the board. Now the others can shoot at it with their best guns. It's up to them to beat it." Mike Mosley tentatively qualifled for the third starting position at 185.319.

Two periods of rain-the first a light fall and the second a storm that shut down the track for the day-interrupted the first session of the time trials. Therefore, Foyt's pole position has to remain tentative until qualifying is resumed next Saturday.

Altogether, 15 cars were qualified Saturday. Eleven others, baving been "presented" in accordance with the rules, are still eligible for a run at the pole position. This group includes three strong drivers - Gordon Johncock, the 1973 winner, Mario Andretti. the 1969 winner, and Mike Hiss. Weather permitting. next week's qualifying will fill out the field to the traditional 33 starters. A qualifying run here is a 10mile solo race against the clock, four laps around the 2 1.2-mile rectangular course of Indianapolis Motor Speedway. The qualifving speed is determined by the average of the four laps.

A crowd of 36,052, third largest in San Diego's six-year history, saw Roric Farrison pick up his third victory in eight decisions with the nintb-inning relief help of Tom House and Danny Prisella.

Willie McCovey homered for the Padres, his first of the season and No. '14 of his career.

The European Football Union banned the three Atletico playera from three European matches and fined the Spanish club 100,000 Swiss francs (about $30,000)—the heaviest penalty ever imposed by UEFA—for its misbehavior in the trio also did not play in Madrid's second-leg conquest of Glasgow. But under threat of being banned from future European com-petition, Atletico will avoid any further incidents in the Heysel Stadium tomorrow. Bayern approaches the match in a confident mood after clincb-

ing its third successive West German league title last weekend. After Saturday's 1-0 victors over Offenbach Kickers assured it of the league title, Bayern coach Udo Lattek said: 'Now the pressure is off the team. At least there is now no danger that we can lose two titles in one week." Franz Beckenbauer, one of six West German World Cup stars on the Bayern team, said: "This the most crucial bour in the history of our club."

But Atletico is not iotlmidated by the formidable reputation of its opponeots. Mucb of its confldence stems from manager Juan Carlos Lorenzo, an Argentinian. Atletico's record in this season's competition is more impressive, if less spectacular, than Atletico has scored nine goals and conceded only two while Bayern has given away 14 and scored 20. These statistics accurately reflect the teams' strengths and weaknesses. Bayern, a threat when moving forward, has often left itself dangerously exposed on defense, while Atletico's preoccupation with defense leaves rare

Seats for Sale

FRANKFURT, May 14 1Reuers: --More than 1.500,000 tickets of the 2,500,000 available for the World Cup soccer games in West Germany have been sold, with Britain the No. 1 customer after the host country, the organizing committee announced here yesterday.

About 50,000 tickels, onc-sixth of the tickets which went abroad, have been sold to British socces fans, although England was eliminated in earlier rounds. Scotland, though, gained the finals. West German officials said they would have been able to seli another 50,000 tickets in Britain if England had qualified.

The officials said East Germany had taken only 10,561 tickets, Insisting that its visitors should go to the West by special trains, stay together in trainloads of 1,700 and sit together in the stadiums.

For the match in West Berlin between East Germany and Chile. Tita are stately was two-run single and scoring an- Although East Berlin is only 2 short distance from the stadium, fewer than 2,000 East Germans have been given permission to cross the Berlin wall to see the match, and they will have to travel by special train which will deposit them in the immediate stadium area.

Brewers Buy Hegan

NEW YORK, May 14 INYTI.— The New York Yankees, who made Mike Hegan unhappy by acquiring Chris Chambliss to play first base, made him happy yesterday by selling him to the Allwaukee Brewers. The Brewers, one of three teams Hegan had asked to be sent to, had claimed the first basenian on waivers but wound up paying more than the $25,000 waiver price.

Morals and Politics

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON-What is alarm- the Nixon who made war by pering about the Republicans' rush to abandon the good ship Nixon is the high moral posture they are striking as they go over the side, Being repelled by a president's moral standard is Billy Graham's Work and, when you see politicians usurping the job. it's time to hie to the church door and chain the poor box.

A group of poiiticians deciding to dump a presi-Baker dent because his morals are bad is like the Mafia getting together to bump off the godfather for not going to church on Sunday. It just isn't done in such circles.

There may be sound legal reasons for getting Nixon out, but the debarking Republicans are not talking law. They are talk-ing morals, and a politician talkmorals needs to be taken with a heavy dose of stomach

The chances in this case are that moral outrage cloaks a writhing mass of self-interest, that what really worries the boys is not the state of the President's morality but the lively possibility that they will all be wiped out in the next election unless they are shed of him fast,

This sudden concern about morality began with publication of the Watergate tapes, which is odd. If morality in the administration was ever to be invoked as justifiable cause for condemning the President, a far stronger case could have been made years ago regarding his conduct of the Vietnam war.

And yet those who raised moral objections about Vietnam were generally viewed by politicians of both parties as soft-beaded bleeding hearts trying to corrupt the professionalism of government by injecting criteria that belonged in the pulpit, By any reasonable moral standard the Nixon of the Watergate tapes seems a fairly decent fellow compared to the Nixon of the Christmas bombing of Hanoi or

sonal decree on Cambodia

In fact, the private Nixon we meet in the Waterrate transcript seems a far more human fellow than the public Nixon we have watched on television all these ears. The public Nixon had the look of a manufactured man who might have been kept stored in a White House closet between public showings. Some might say that the private Nixon is not a very likeable man He doesn't trust people. He is given to petty backbiting. But these are common characteristics even among ordinary men, and in any event there is no requirement that presidents be likeable chaps only that they be able to deceive the majority into believing they are likeable.

On the other hand, the private Nixon also has moments of touch-ing sensitivity for other people He frets about the pain being inflicted on the families of the young men caught up in the scandal and finds it too "painful" to face his old friend John Mitchell in person and tell him he must take the fall. This is a far more likeshie Nixon than the public Nixon pronouncing grimjawed determination never to grant amnesty to the draft

His great weakness, we discover, is the very weakness any one of us might suffer from in his position. He is, surprisingly, indecinot bring himself to do the deci-sive deed that would change all the terms of his problem. Instead, he sits about for hours and hours talking, talking, talking, considering possibilities and weighing "scenarios," but never reaching a decision.

A good deal of the time, he is simply incoherent, as who wouldn't be, having that nightmare to deal with, The trouble may be that the private Nixon, being indisputably human is so different from the public Nixon that the public may false pretenses.

But the issue is not morality, as the Republicans insist, It is whether the Republicans can survive the public's shock at discovering that Nixon is real.

The word seems to have gotten out very quickly among Europe's rich that Portugal can be given a miss this season, ostentation having at least temporarily gone out of style.

Post-Coup Climate of a Portuguese Casino

By John Vinocur

ESTORIL, Portugal (AP).—A fat lady who carried her coins around in a clear bag was refused admission last week to the Estoril casino's main gambling

Portugal's new democracy has its limits. For the time being, the old paternalistic rules about who can throw their money away are still in effect at the casino, a kind of modified airline terminal in marble and green baize at the edge of the Atlantic.

The woman a Portuguese, was told that cause she was not accompanied by her husband and, alternatively did not have his written permission, she would not be allowed to sit at the blackjack and roulette tables.

Civil Servants

Had she protested that she was single, the woman would have been required to produce evidence that she was in the liberal professions—doctor, lawyer, teacher -to get in. A secretary or a tap dancer would need written authorization from an mployer. Portuguese civil servants must still come up with proof of income other than their salaries to shoot craps.

And members of the Portuguese armed forces can just forget about the idea entirely—they remain banned from entry, from privates up to Gen. Antonio de Spinola, the leader of the democratically oriented military junta.

We would like to see the rules eased up now," a casino worker told a foreigner who went through an identity check just short of fingerprinting to get into the gambling "Maybe the government has other priorities to deal with first."

Out of Style

But the coup has had an effect on the casino to the extent that the sleek, wealthy Portuguese, in evening clothes and haute-couture dresses, are staying away now and leaving the halls to small patrols of widows off the tourist buses. The mood is far from the old Estoril high life. The word seems to have gotten out very quickly among Europe's rich that Portugal can be given a miss this season, ostenta-tion having at least temporarily gone out of style.

Down the road from the casino, the Palace Hotel tapestries, fine wooden paneling and the quiet of deep carpeting is now almost empty except for the beliboys in red livery and the barman in a white jacket and wing collar.

A man who saw enough material for five spy novels at the hotel during Portugal's days as an espionage center in . World War II, the Palace barman prides himself on his tact. When he is asked about the future of the hotel in a country where the rich are likely to have an increasingly difficult time to stay that way, he replies:

"This is supposed to be a palace, not a museum. I hope for heaven's sake that these new people put things in order quickly."

A man in his 30s enters the bar, orders a vodka and orange juice, and toasts the only other guest. The translation of the toast, the barman explains later, is "to

Nevada Madam (Legal) PEOPLE: Is Running for Office

"I probably know people better than most of the people who are seeking public office," Beverly Harreli says. And she adds that she is the only active madam ever to seek elective office. Mrs. Harrell, who owns the Cottonteil Ranch, a legal brothel 150 miles north of Las Vegas, announced Monday that she would seek the Democratic nomination for the state assembly in a three-county district in -central Nevada, "I am ready for the legislature. I hope the legislature is ready for me," she said. She said that she wanted to make clear that her brothel was legal so people would not think that she was a "shady character operating at the whim of paid-off public officials," but rather "a business-

$52,400 in jeweiry given her and her daughters by King Faisal of Saudi Arabia out of a bedroom safe and into a special "deposits unit," columnist Maxine Cheshire said Tuesday. The jewels were moved on the advice of White House counsel J. Fred Buzhardt after she inquired about them, Mrs. Cheshire said. The gifts, which Buzhardt told Mrs Cheshire were public property, in-cluded a $52,400 six-piece set of emeralds and diamonds, a pair of ruby-and-diamond earrings, a diamond bracelet with a watch in the clasp, a diamond-and-ruby pin and a diamond-and-sapphire pin. the law. At the time of the turnover, the diamond bracelet and the pins "had been in the ession of Mrs. Nixon and her daughters for nearly two years without being processed," Mrs. The White House described the use of the jewelry as "a natural situation." The Nixon administration has "recorded all gifts in great detail," said Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren. Mrs. Cheshire's story "manufactured this situation in a sensational way" and "by inference cast the first family in a bad light." Answering a barrage of questions about the jewelry at a White House briefing, Warren said that the gift was recorded as received by the White House gift unit in July, 1972, and that "there was TUIGNAC, France (NYT),-The main street of this village in southwestern France begins at the elementary school for 56 boys and girls, runs past the town hall, the bistro and the 13th-century Romanesque Church of St. Nazaire, and then swings down a corridor of chestnut trees toward four towering cypresses that shade and guard the cemetery.

When Louis Bouchard decided that at age 73 he was too tired to carry on at the bistro, and when no one else was willing to take over his license, "one link in the chain was broken," said Jacques Marronneaut, a farmer and Juignac's mayor for 10 years. That was why Mayor Marronneaut and his council of 11 farm-

"Otherwise," the mayor observed, "there would have been no place for the men to wait on Sunday mornings while their women went to church, for the bereaved to console themselves after a loved one was buried down the road, for a family to entertain friends, neighbors and relations at a wedding party, for the local veterans' association, huntsociety and trap-shooting club to meet and give their members a chance to take a drink."

The Rev. Guy de Coudin, who says mass at the village church and at a Benedictine abbey on a nearby hill, officially welcomed the action in the parish bulletin. He told a reporter: "It is an element of good for the col-
